Lifemark Labs, a business in Kelowna, British Columbia, Canada, which has recently successfully launched their Bento Lunch Box on Amazon US, is now proud to announce they have also launched it on Amazon Canada. The product itself is unchanged and it is already receiving positive reviews on the Canadian market as well.

"When we originally launched our Bento Box, we decided to focus on the US market as a kind of test," says Scott Grant from Lifemark Labs. "It quite literally flew off the shelves and we were inundated with positive reviews. While we had planned to launch in Canada if the American launch was a success in January of next year, all the positive comments encouraged us to push that date forward to now. We really want to thank all our customers for their words of support, and for the fact they love our product so much."

The Bento Box on Amazon.ca is available in four different colors, which are blue, green, orange and purple. It features one large and two small compartments, making it suitable for school or work lunch boxes, picnic boxes or other on the go snacks. Made from completely food safe materials, the product also encourages people to eat healthier by offering proper portion controls. Additionally, Lifemark Labs currently adds a free eBook that includes recipes and snacks perfect for the Bento Box. In so doing, people can truly get the most out of the product.

While only very recently launched in Canada, the product is already receiving positive reviews, just as it did in the US. "I am really excited about the Lifemark Labs Bento Box," says Kathy G. "It's super sturdy, easy to use and makes carrying your lunch or any meal terrifically easy. It looks great, and the seal keeps your foods fresh and prevents anything from leaking. I highly recommend it."

It is believed one of the reasons why the Canadian market is flocking to purchase the product is because it was featured by BOW Girls on YouTube. This has been a terrific third party endorsement for the company, who want to thank BOW Girls for their support.
