Ridgeline Roofers Columbia Offers Flat Roofing Solutions, Especially Torch-Down Roofing Services

May 11, 2023

COLUMBIA, MD - May 11, 2023 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Ridgeline Roofers Columbia, a roofing company based in Columbia, MD, wants to point out that one of the flat roofing solutions that they specialize in is torch-down roofing in Howard County. Torch down roofing, which is also called asphalt rolled roofing or modified bitumen roofing, works in the same way as asphalt shingle roofs but are more suitable for flat roofs or low-sloped roofs. While it doesn't have an impact on the appearance of the property, it can provide the same level of protection for the property.

Torch down roofing has a UV-reflective coating that offers a high level of insulation. Because the roofing tarp is melted with a torch, a water-tight barrier is provided for the roof that prevents the water from the rain or snow from getting through and cause damage to the interior of the home. While its installation is more difficult and requires the help of roofing experts, such as those from Ridgeline Roofers Columbia, a key advantage of torch-down roofing is its waterproof seal that results from the roofing tarp being melted by a torch flame. This ensures no gaps where water from rain and snow can get through. While it requires the help of roofing experts for the installation and ensuring that the appropriate procedures are followed, the ultimate outcome is an excellent roofing that is as strong as the roads in major highways.

A representative for Ridgeline Roofers Columbia says, "Our team of experienced roofing professionals specializes in providing top-quality torch-down roofing services that are perfect for low-slope or flat roofs. Torch-down roofing is known for its excellent resistance to water, fire, and UV rays, making it a great choice for those looking for a roofing solution that offers superior protection. In addition to its excellent protective properties, torch-down roofing is also a cost-effective and easy-to-maintain option. With regular maintenance and care, your torch-down roofing can last for many years, providing you with peace of mind and a reliable roofing solution for your property."

An alternative to torch-down roofing is ethylene propylene diene monomer (EPDM) roofing, which Ridgeline Roofers can also provide. EPDM is a type of synthetic rubber that is made from propylene, ethylene, and diene monomers. Its molecular structure is supported by a single bond, which is a chemically saturated backbone that provides it with extreme strength against the elements. This molecular structure allows EPDM to be strong against UV rays and ozone because these cannot break its molecular structure, in contrast to the double bonds of natural rubber. The double bonds prevent the polymer chain of rubber from coming closer such that only the weak van der Waals forces are available to prevent the chemical bonds from breaking. EPDM roofing has the same benefits as torch down roofing and they have the same lifespan. However, the latter can provide more protection against hail.
