May 15, 2023

Atlanta, Georgia - May 15, 2023 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Atlanta, GA based Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. is pleased to inform the residents of Newnan that the team's full legal might is now at their disposal. The firm has made it their mission to uphold the rights of those who have suffered as a result of collisions on the road, negligence in the workplace, medical malpractice and more, and they are ready to do the same for communities in Newnan, GA.

An individual can be injured at any time and virtually anywhere. Most will be familiar with injuries that take place on the road, in collisions between cars, trucks, motorcycles and so on, but personal injury law covers a wide variety of scenarios. In most cases, the law seeks to ensure that the victim of another party's negligence or even malicious intent can seek compensation for their pain and suffering. However, the issue is that this does not always mean a victim's rights are fully respected by all involved parties.

For instance, while it is heavily encouraged that everyone get insurance coverage for any situation they might regularly be at risk in (such as driving), an insurer's overall priority is often to its own profits, not the client. This means insurers have a strong incentive to deny or diminish compensation even when a policy appears to cover the incident in question. As a result, an accident victim may find that their insurer (or the insurer of the other party) is unwilling to pay the true amount they are due. Fortunately, Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. is available to help victims recover the compensation they deserve.

The firm's top piece of advice to victims is to seek medical care at the earliest opportunity. In addition to minimizing the risk of further injury, this creates a paper trail that can be used as evidence when a claim is filed. Once they are stable, however, the firm says a victim's next step should always be to talk to a reputable personal injury lawyer. Many firms, such as Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., provide free initial consultations that a client can use to get their bearings and make an informed decision about their future.

Under no circumstances, the firm says, should a victim talk to an insurer (or an insurance adjuster). While it may seem helpful to give as much information as possible, the firm warns that this may be used against the victim. As such, it is in their best interests to have their lawyer present before talking to an insurance company or other official party.

Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. is accustomed to working with clients who have no prior experience dealing with claims, courts or other aspects of the legal system. Given how confusing the process can be, they make it a point to educate clients on their options as well as what they may expect as their case moves forward.

As Philip M. says in a review, "By far, the best attorney's office ever. From the beginning once you contact them, these guys work with you, and it actually feels like they care about you and not the money. My case worker, Miss Tawanda Sheffield, was checking up on me regularly and assuring me that my case was being handled well. She was the most professional attorney representative I have ever talked to. When I wouldn't understand anything, these guys would easily explain it to me. At the very end, they sent me a personal letter thanking me for doing business with them. Believe me, you won't go wrong if you hire them, and be sure that you will have a positive outcome about your case."

Leon G. also shares, "My review is from my own experience. Mr. Hammill and his staff did an excellent job. They returned all of my phone calls and emails. They answered all of my questions and concerns. They educated me on what I could expect. These guys are professional and determined. I have no complaints so if you want a lawyer who's going to fight for you this is the firm you hire. I recommend this firm, and Mr. Hammill and his staff are a cut above the rest. Thank you so much."

The firm invites interested parties to call their office to schedule a free consultation. Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. notably takes no fees unless a case is won, making them invaluable to anyone who is seeking compensation for their injuries.
