For moderate sprains, immobilisation of the ankle joint with a brace, cast, or walking boot may be necessary, along with physical therapy exercises to strengthen the surrounding muscles.

Severe sprains may require surgery, followed by physical therapy and rehabilitation to regain strength, flexibility, and mobility.

Director Chalerm Tuantab emphasised that Align Health Collective is dedicated to delivering the utmost care and support to their patients. The podiatry team is committed to aiding patients in their speedy and efficient recovery, and they strive to ensure long-term relief from symptoms.

To prevent sprained ankles, it is recommended to wear appropriate footwear that provides support, cushioning, and stability for the feet and ankles.
