Anaheim, California - Lighthouse Treatment Center, a drug and alcohol treatment facility in Anaheim, California, has received recognition for its exceptional efforts in supporting students at the Santa Ana College Fundraiser. The purpose of the fundraiser was to gather money for students in need by providing assistance with their college-related expenses.

The Lighthouse was honored by Congressman Lou Correa (46th District) and Assembly Member Avelino Valencia (68th District) for its contributions to the Cruising for Higher Education fundraiser, presented by Project Rise. Project Rise is a Santa Ana College student club assisting formerly incarcerated and justice-impacted students as they navigate their higher education goals.

Peter Davidson, President of the Lighthouse said, "We are humbled and honored to receive this acknowledgment. The Lighthouse has always been dedicated to helping individuals in our community and we are proud to support the Santa Ana College students who are working hard to reach their educational goals."

The Cruising for Higher Education fundraiser was designed to promote resource awareness and support student events and needs.

Jen Sandoval, Project Rise President said, "We are not defined by our past but rather by the future we are creating. By helping these students reach their educational goals, we are not only changing their lives for the better but also the future of our community."
