

New Music Production System Launched In Norway

December 17, 2015

December 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Skredderlyd, a company in Oslo, Norway, has started to offer a new concept in distributing licensed music for a great price. The system 'Sounds Apart', is already proving to be very popular. Their goal is to ensure the right sound can be obtained for any project, using traditional and modern methods alike. Launched by duo Fredrik Wandem and Thommie Myhrvold, the new Sounds Apart concept is already becoming very popular in the world of music production.

Fredrik Wandem says: "Myself and Thommie have years of experience in terms of composing and sound design. We have worked together to create the sounds for films, audio books, commercials, theater, radio, dance performance, and more. We have a musician background ourselves, having been songwriters and producers for a number of bands. This experience, and our continued contacts in the music world, have enabled us to create this brand new system and we're happy to see it is so positively received already."

The sound design company has received consistent five star reviews for the work that they have completed and they are quickly setting themselves apart as the best music production company in Norway. Clients include a number of well-known bands and artists on the Norwegian scene, and the company has also started to branch out abroad.

Wandem and Myhrvold are also involved in their own music composition. Through their new Sounds Apart system, people can purchase the licenses for the different tunes they have created, enabling them to use them as they see fit. The duo is committed to remaining affordable, which is something that has popularized them across the country and beyond. "I purchased the license for Desert Drone," says Edgar L. "The tone is beautiful and dark, and incredibly emotional. The acoustic tones carry you away into a magical world. I am currently producing an independent movie and the sound is absolutely perfect for it. I won't give more away, but rest assured that I am incredibly pleased with what Skredderlyd has been able to do for me."

All tracks can be listened to on the company's website, where they can also be purchased.
