London, UK, DEC 5, 2015 ? In order to educate London residents about burglary prevention, Locked-out Locksmiths (www.lockedout-locksmiths.co.uk) has just published a new blog post authored by Brendan Connolly entitled 'Consult a Professional London Locksmith to Secure Your Home Properly?.'

The biggest worry of any homeowner is the security of their abode. The more difficult the lock is to crack, the longer a burglar will take to enter a home, making them nervous and encouraging them to leave. Knowing some basic info about typical locks on the market will allow for making a better decision.

The article discusses different types of locks. 'The deadbolt lock functions by 'bolting' a door into the doorframe via a metal bolt. Usually moved in and out-of-place by the knob or the key, Deadbolt locks are pretty simple to break through because a burglar can just pry the door apart by hooking in a crowbar or any long tool to disengage the metal bolt.'

'The best way to remedy that is to have a secure set of locks installed by a reliable London locksmith,?

states Connolly. 'A professional locksmith would be able to check your doors and evaluate what type of locks are appropriate for them.'

The article relates that 'an entry lockset can be locked on both sides which means that even if a burglar reaches in, the doors will remain locked. The problem with this kind of lock is that it can be an obstacle during emergencies like a fire, though having the key ready reduces this risk.'

'Locks protect against a lot of intruders but they're not fool-proof,' says Connolly. 'If your home is broken into, contact a 24-hour locksmith in London so that they can do repairs immediately and restore your home's security.'
