Newhouse Restoration is helping Long Island homeowners fight water leaks and flood damage in their property with its fast and seamless water damage restoration services.

There are several reasons why a property might get waterlogged. From plumbing leaks to sewage backups, appliance malfunctions, and, of course, flooding, water damage can wreak havoc on a home or business and lead to long-term health and safety issues as it can seep into the property?s foundational elements posing a risk to its structural integrity.

The spokesperson for Newhouse Restoration, Kristin Newhouse, talks about the approach that has to be taken when restoring water damage by saying, ?It is of utmost importance that you respond quickly or the damage can become extremely difficult to contain. Apart from the immediate deterioration, if the pillars, drywall, and insulation soak up the moisture, it can weaken your home from the inside and reduce its lifespan.?

Newhouse Restoration prides itself on rushing to its customers? aid on short notice to remedy all common causes of water damage including burst pipes, flood damage from natural disasters, malfunctioning washing machines, and more. The company?s experienced restoration crew members use state-of-the-art equipment to bring the home back to its pre-damage state as if the damage never occurred in the first place.

?There are three main categories of water damage based on the source of the water and how contaminated it is,? says Kristin. ?Clean water comes from sources like a broken water supply line or a leaking faucet. Gray water contains moderate levels of contaminants, and its source is usually a washing machine or dishwasher. Black water is the most contaminated and includes sewage leaks and flood damage. These require different remediation techniques, all of which our restoration experts are adept at executing.?

The company?s proven water flood damage cleanup process starts with an inspection where the crew forms a plan of action. First, premium-grade pumps and vacuums are used to remove the standing water quickly before the damage spreads. The moisture that has seeped into the construction materials is then mitigated using drying and dehumidifying equipment. Finally, the damaged parts are replaced, and new ones are installed in their place to make the home look exactly like it did before the damage.

Apart from water damage, Newhouse Restoration also offers other kinds of restoration services including fire or smoke damage, storm damage, biohazard cleanup, asbestos removal, mold removal, and more. Long Island homeowners can rely on the company to take care of the restoration process from start to finish without having to reach out to multiple contractors. Newhouse Restoration also provides clients the support they need to get the cost of the restoration covered through their homeowner?s insurance, if applicable.

The veteran-supporting, family-owned business has received tons of praise from the Long Island property owners it has helped over the years. Newhouse Restoration boasts more than 100 reviews across all its online profiles with an overall rating of 4.49 out of 5.0 with homeowners thanking the company for its swift response, high-quality restoration, responsive customer service, and affordable pricing.

One reviewer notes the meticulousness of Newhouse Restoration?s crew by saying, ?We called Josh and he had someone here promptly. Not only was his crew punctual and prompt, but they were also CLEAN. Everything was bagged up and in my garbage. I wouldn?t have even known they were here. Rates were also super affordable. We truly appreciate the Newhouse crew! Thank you!!?

Another client thanked the company for helping them with the insurance claim by saying, ?A huge thank you to Josh and the team at Newhouse Restoration. He literally dropped everything he was doing to find and quickly fix a serious water issue I had in my house. He worked hand-in-hand with the insurance adjuster, and we were back up and running in 2.5 days. Thank you!?
