With one of the highest R-values out of current commercially available insulation options, spray foam strikes a balance between affordability and energy efficiency that is hard to match. The insulation material is applied as a liquid which later expands into a foam, forming an airtight seal that helps prevent air infiltration and considerably minimizes heat transfer. Homeowners can look forward to an up to 30 percent increase in energy efficiency as well as an improvement in air quality due to spray foam's ability to block seasonal allergens and reduce the growth of mold.

Spray foam insulation solutions can be customized based on the property owner's budget and priorities. Homeowners can choose to start with the attic and reap the immense power-saving benefits that directly lead to lower utility bills. When relying on experienced industry professionals, such as the team over at iFOAM, clients can also get a reliable estimate of how much money they will save for years to come after upgrading their home's insulation. The company prides itself on using state-of-the-art technology and high-efficiency spray foam products to help homeowners save big for a sizeable return on investment.

iFOAM of Eastern Iowa is led by Eric Dietzenbach, an Iowa native whose fond childhood memories of working with his family on home improvement projects inculcated in him a love of all things real estate at an early age. After working in construction for many years and securing degrees in Finance and Real Estate from the University of Northern Iowa, he dove first into entrepreneurship with the iFOAM franchise, using his trade skills and math skills to serve the local community.

"Insulation, while not having high visibility, is one of the most financially sound home improvement decisions you can make," says Eric. "Sure, you can go for the flashy interior décor to refurnish your home, but proper long-lasting insulation saves you money in the long term. It is one of the easiest decisions you can make to spend your hard-earned dollars to invest in your future and build cash flow. iFOAM's extensive industry experience and premium quality foam products make it the perfect partner to make that happen.
