July 17, 2023 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

PA based MDL Restoration is providing fire damage restoration services to the residents of Tullytown and the surrounding areas. Thanks to their fast-response team, MDL Restoration can be at any location in the tri-state area in two hours or less. Residents are advised to contact the company as soon as possible for emergency mitigation services.

Fire damage can be extraordinarily difficult to deal with. It has a reputation for being one of the most destructive forces of nature for good reason, the company says, and this is why timely mitigation is so crucial. If the team is notified early enough, they can respond quickly and maximize the amount of property that can be salvaged.

“Burned property can itself be impossible to reclaim,” points out MDL Restoration, “but you have more to worry about than just what the fire has affected directly. The chemicals that form during such intense temperatures can cause further damage to other objects or make them unusable in other ways. Certain odors can be both unpleasant and dangerous, and a prompt response is always the best way to rescue as much as possible.?

Fire damage mitigation can involve a number of essential steps. When MDL Restoration arrives onsite, their first course of action is always to assess the property for any immediate safety concerns. Once identified, these issues will either be addressed or clearly marked to help ensure they will not be a hazard to anyone else (be it the team or other parties). This safety assessment will also involve an examination of the entire building's structural integrity. Again, support structures or techniques will be implemented to address this.

MDL Restoration will then identify any objects or surfaces that have been contaminated as a result of the fire. While remaining unburned, they can still be hazardous as a result of the smoke, soot and chemicals they have imbibed. Once an assessment of immediate hazards is complete, the next step is to develop a comprehensive mitigation strategy to handle the overall situation.

Fire damage should always be taken seriously, and the company discourages anyone from reentering a building after a fire. In all cases, they should assume it is not safe to do so and wait for professionals to arrive. Fires can cause buildings to become structurally unsound, either totally or in part, and the latter can mean people will have a false sense of safety walking near walls or under ceilings that are now prone to collapse.

Similarly, indoor air pollution can persist well after a fire has died out, and corrosive soot can accumulate on surfaces as well as the interior of ventilation systems (thereby carrying the hazard throughout a property). Most buildings also have extensive wiring, and if the power is not disengaged, this can represent a serious electrocution risk. As such, it is recommended that utilities be turned off as soon as possible when a fire breaks out (if possible), and they should not be turned back on until a licensed professional has assessed the damage. This includes water and gas as well as electricity.

MDL Restoration says it is unwise for people to assume that their property is a total loss after a fire (or that they can handle mitigation by themselves). Modern techniques allow much more to be saved today than was previously possible, and professional crews always utilize the appropriate safety gear during a job. The average home or business owner does not have such equipment, and this makes mitigation both frustrating and dangerous.

The company offers mitigation services for fire as well as water, mold damage and more. Over the years, they have helped many residents reduce the effects of such damage and rescue affected possessions and property.

One homeowner says, "I had an amazing experience working with MDL, they recently did some work on my house and I couldn't be happier with the job they did. Matt, the project manager, was so helpful and diligent. He paid attention to details and made sure everything went smoothly. I was very pleased with the way everything was handled from start to finish. Everyone who came into my home was respectful and helpful. I am thankful I chose MDL to work on my house and would recommend them to anyone!?

Anyone in need of a fire damage or smoke odor removal service may contact MDL Restoration. The team is available 24/7 for emergency mitigation services and can be anywhere in the tri state area within two hours.
