Arrowhead Clinic Can Provide Personal Injury Doctor Services in Georgia

July 17, 2023

Peachtree City, Georgia - July 17, 2023 -
Arrowhead Clinic, a chiropractic practice with offices in various locations in Georgia, takes pride in having a team of doctors specializing in personal injuries and can help car accident victims in pursuing a personal injury claim. They can also refer accident victims to a law firm for the appropriate legal advice. They will focus on coming up with a personalized treatment plan to fit the unique needs of each patient to ensure quick recovery and optimal healing.

A spokesperson for Arrowhead Clinic says, ?At Arrowhead Clinic, we work closely with some of the premier car accident injury doctors at our chiropractic clinics in Georgia and South Carolina. Our chiropractors know that not all injuries are the same, and most tend to require more diagnostic testings, such as MRIs, to get the proper diagnosis. Car accidents are one of the nation's leading causes of personal injuries. For over four decades, Arrowhead Clinic has treated car wreck victims who have suffered a wide range of injuries due to Car Accidents. These injuries have deeply impacted the everyday lives of many of our chiropractic patients, causing significant pain and reduced mobility.?

Aside from their team of personal injury doctors, Arrowhead Clinic also offers the services of top-rated personal injury chiropractors. This is a chiropractor who is focused on providing treatment for injuries and conditions due to trauma, such as auto accidents and repetitive stress. The clinic?s personal injury chiropractors are capable of diagnosing, treating, and preventing conditions that result from imbalances in the joints, spine, and other parts of the body. A personal injury chiropractor can help with various kinds of personal injuries, such as whiplash, strains, sprains, and contusions (bruising). They can also help with chronic personal injuries like carpal tunnel syndrome, tendonitis, arthritis, and low back pain that result from overuse or repetitive movement.

The kind of adjustment employed in a chiropractic session can vary depending on the specific needs of a particular patient. For injuries caused by personal accidents, a number of typical adjustments may be used to treat muscle or joint pain, discomfort, and stiffness. The chiropractor can use manual adjustments, which apply force to mobilize joints and restore proper alignment to the musculoskeletal system. These adjustments are typically done fast and need more force compared to other techniques. Manual adjustments are usually done on the neck, spine, and jaw.

Another technique the chiropractor can use is cranial sacral therapy, which is similar to manual adjustments but is gentler and focused only on the head area. It involves gentle manipulation around the pelvis and cranium to discover any misalignments and correct them to restore balance in the patient?s head area. They can also provide extremity adjustments, which are usually performed on the arms, wrists, ankles, legs, and feet. For these adjustments, mobilization techniques are used to help restore the usual joint movements for the extremities.

The chiropractor can also provide instrument-assisted adjustments. This method employs special instruments to adjust hard-to-reach areas of the body, for instance, the sacroiliac joints. The instruments focus pressure accurately at various angles where manual manipulation may be too difficult or impossible to provide.

The chiropractor can also perform the Activator Method?, which is a type of instrument-assisted chiropractic adjusting that employs a low-force instrument device to provide a controlled, rapid impulse into dysfunctional spinal elements. This enables precise targeting without causing tissue trauma or unnecessary muscle tension while also avoiding causing pain or discomfort during the treatment.

Started in 1977, Arrowhead Clinic has a team of leading chiropractors and car accident doctors in 18 clinics in different locations around the state of Georgia. Currently, they have already provided treatment to over 400,000 accident victims during the past 40 years and they have earned the reputation of being top chiropractic care providers. They have in-house x-ray equipment to help with the diagnosis of the injuries of patients during their initial consultation. In addition to car accident injuries, they can also offer treatment for different types of pain and injuries.

Those who want to learn more about the chiropractic services provided at the Arrowhead Clinic can visit their website or contact them on the phone or through email.
