The Idaho Advocates handle a wide range of cases, including those caused by speeding, distracted driving, dangerous driving, road rage, and driving under the influence, among others.They understand that no two motorcycle accidents are the same, and their experience and expertise allow them to provide relevant help tailored to each unique case.

Victims of motorcycle accidents often suffer from severe bodily injuries and mental trauma, in addition to property damage. Despite wearing protective gear, the chance for serious injuries, including spinal cord and back injuries, severed limbs, head injuries, and internal organ injuries, is quite high. The Idaho Advocates are committed to helping victims navigate these challenging circumstances and secure the compensation they need to recover.

The firm distinguishes itself from other law firms by empathizing with the frustration, anger, and disappointment victims often feel after an accident. They understand the tactics insurance companies use to reduce settlement fees and are prepared to battle insurers to fight for what their clients deserve.

The Idaho Advocates prioritize each case, ensuring clients receive their deserved compensation.

They offer legal assistance, file legitimate claims, prove liability through proper evidence and facts, and are prepared to take the case to court if necessary. They also compile all medical records and track all bills related to the case.

While motorcycle accidents can take months or even years to resolve, the firm encourages clients to take their time during recovery to avoid additional complications. They work diligently to settle cases as quickly as possible, often within 5-8 months for less severe injuries.

While it's impossible to determine the exact amount of a motorcycle accident claim until all details have been investigated, The Idaho Advocates work tirelessly to secure compensation for lost wages, the severity of the injury, property damage, and pain and suffering.
