Mesa, Arizona - August 14, 2023 -
Dry Star Restoration, a company based in Mesa, AZ, is offering the services of emergency water damage contractors in Scottsdale, AZ, and neighboring areas. After a flooding event in the home or business, the homeowner or business owner will likely want to restore things back to normal. That is why Dry Star offers emergency water damage restoration services to bring back things to their original condition as fast as possible.

Richard Appel, owner of Dry Star Restoration, says, ?Water damage can happen for a number of different reasons. Toilets can crack, pipes can break, and rivers can overflow their banks during flooding events. In general, water from a toilet tank or a broken intake pike will be cleaner than damage that comes from sewage or a rising river or creek. Professional water damage contractors will be able to closely examine the source of the water to determine the proper course of action. In most cases, working fast will be key. The faster that water can be removed from fabrics and infrastructure, the better the chance they have of being used again.?

Water damage in the home or business can occur due to a number of reasons. Water pipes can break, toilet tanks can crack, and rivers can overflow as a result off a storm. Water damage restoration requires the services of experts and licensed contractors who are able to evaluate the source of the water and come up with the appropriate course of action. In general, they will need to really work quickly because the faster the water is eliminated from the infrastructure and fabrics, the better chance of recovering them and using them again.

The drywall and flooring are two specific areas that will need to be watched closely because if dirty water finds its way into the material, especially in the pore spaces, it would be very difficult to dry them out. The professional water damage repair contractors will quickly assess the damage to make sure that important parts like the floors and walls are restored as soon as possible. If the walls are dried quickly enough, they might be salvageable, which could mean a substantial amount of savings.

Richard Appel adds, ?It is also important to remember that there is a fundamental relationship between water damage and mold/mildew. Mold, in fact, thrives in damp places. Mold and mildew are especially likely to grow in places where standing water has been allowed to accumulate for a long time. To decrease the risk that you will develop a mold problem in the days after one of these flooding events, it is best to begin the water damage restoration immediately. Water damage experts will be able to begin working on drying interior areas so that mildew and mold do not have a chance to gain a foothold in your house.?

These water damage restoration experts will also focus on cleaning and drying the carpets as quickly as possible. In general, carpets and rugs will have to be replaced with new ones after they have been waterlogged. If dirty water from sewage or the river has soaked into the carpet, it would be a good idea to simply tear out the carpet and replace it.
