Smilez Pediatric Dental Group, a dental practice in Gainesville, VA, is focused on providing pediatric dentistry services in Gainesville and surrounding areas. They are committed to ensuring that the child's first visit to the dentist will be fun and enjoyable. The practice also offers dental care for babies. The Smilez Pediatric Dental Group infant dental care is focused on helping with the arrival of the baby's first tooth and even before that because the baby's gums have to be cared for.

A spokesperson for Smilez Pediatric Dental Group says, "Children are often frightened of the dentist, but their first visit should be fun and enjoyable! While they are probably not scared of the dentist, they are scared of going to a place that they know nothing about. When your child comes to Smilez Pediatric Dental Group, we do our best to ensure that they are put at ease from the moment they walk through the door until their appointment is finished. We will use simple language that they can understand, so that they feel comfortable with the process and know why it is important to have us check their teeth. Our team is committed to providing your child a level of treatment and care that is unsurpassed."

The American Academy for Pediatric Dentistry recommends that all children visit a dentist by the time they have reached their first birthday. Baby teeth start to erupt when the infant is six to 12 months old, thus it is never too early to begin preventative dental care for the child to maintain the best possible oral health. When the baby teeth start to erupt, they will continue this process until they reach the age of three. During this period, the gums of the baby may be sore and tender, which is why it is recommended that the parent gently rub the gums with a cool cloth or with the fingers. A teething ring may also be used. By the time teething is completed, the child should have 20 baby teeth.

Regular visits to the pediatric dentist can offer a number of advantages for the kids. The first benefit is the early detection and prevention of dental problems. Pediatric dentists are trained to detect dental problems during the early stages, which enables early treatment and avoidance of further complications. Second, the child will be able to adopt good oral hygiene habits, such as brushing and flossing, which can help in preventing gum disease and tooth decay.

Third, the pediatric dentist can educate the kids on proper nutrition and how this can affect their dental health. Fourth, the children will be able to develop a positive relationship with dentistry. Fifth, the pediatric dentist will be able to monitor the development of the child's teeth and provide guidance on the best way to care for them as they grow up into adults. Finally, orthodontic issues can be detected as early as possible. The pediatric dentist may refer the child to an orthodontist for prompt intervention, preventing more serious problems later on.

The spokesperson says, "Sugary foods can cause decay very rapidly, so it is important that your children understand just how important brushing and flossing is. Brushing is fun, and the earlier you start your child on the path to good oral hygiene, then the better off they will be. Contact us today to schedule an appointment for your child at our Gainesville office. We will ensure that your child is completely comfortable with the process, and help them carry their great little smile into adulthood."
