December 17, 2015 -
AM Friends & Family Healthcare LLC (AMFFHC), a business in Columbus, OH, is proud to introduce the AMFFHC Tele-monitoring service. This is an innovative, government certified service that is designed to allow seniors and individuals with disabilities remain in their homes while they are being monitored by caregivers. The family members of the patients can also utilize the system to check on them or communicate with them. The telemonitoring system is already proving to be very popular, giving people peace of mind through technology.

"AMFFHC Tele-monitoring is a Web-based "Telecare" system that connects you with real people using the latest wireless technology over the Internet," says Michael Sullivan from AM Friends & Family Healthcare LLC. "It's secure. It gives you freedom. It lets you stay in your own home. Family members can check in and chat face-to-face with their loved ones from anywhere in the world."

AMFFHC Tele-monitoring provides an in-home service to support people as they need them. The support is provided by specially trained caregivers, who actually get to know the users personally. Telecaregivers communicate face-to-face, through the Live Interactive Network Companion or LINC, which is a 15-inch touch screen device. Family members can also use the system to chat face-to-face with their loved ones from anywhere around the world. Essentially, the system is designed to enable those with disabilities and elderly people to continue to live life as independently as possible.

"AMFFHC gives you service with the care of family," adds Michael Sullivan. "You can be confident that you're being cared for in the least restrictive environment so you can continue to live your life as independently as possible."

Important caregiver training has also been released by AMFFHC. The training is highly comprehensive and teaches people all about blood pressure and more. The company recognizes the important role that training and education plays in preparing and supporting caregivers, as well as AMFFHC partners. Anyone who is contracted through the company will receive full and immediate access to the businesses online webinars that focus on Electronic Medical Records and more. Each member will be able to access the AMFFHC administrator, where on going training opportunities are made available to ensure caregivers are able to have the best skills possible, giving people further peace of mind.
