Modern Plumbing Group, an experienced plumbing company serving property owners in Melbourne, is urging local homeowners to find out more about its gas leak detection and repair services.

Gas leaks may start small but pose a great, even life-threatening, risk to those living in or using a property. Not only can they be a health hazard, causing problems such as dizziness and nausea, but all it takes is a spark from a dodgy electrical connection or the flick of a lighter for an uncontrolled gas leak to lead to a fatal explosion. It can cause untold damage to a property, leading to costly repairs and even legal ramifications further down the road. Moreover, insurance will never cover the damage caused due to a gas leak as failing to detect one will void insurance coverage in most cases.

“There are few signs of a gas leak that you should never ignore,” says the spokesperson for Modern Plumbing Group. “Trust your olfactory senses and be on the lookout for a strong, distinct rotten egg or sulfur-like odor. A hissing or whistling sound near gas appliances or pipes is also an indication of a possible leak. Other signs to be aware of include dead house plants or withering vegetation, unexplained physical symptoms, bubbling or blowing dirt, and higher gas bills than usual.”

Modern Plumbing Group recommends property owners take 4 steps to protect themselves if they suspect a gas leak. The first step is turning off all appliances and the main gas supply if it can be done safely. Next, homeowners should ventilate the area by opening doors and windows. Third, customers should avoid anything that might potentially spark, such as flames, light switches, and mobile phones. Finally, to ensure the problem is dealt with safely, one should call in the experts.

“Our expert technicians start with an inspection blitz throughout your property,” says the spokesperson. “We leave no stone unturned and check everything from your gas appliances and piping systems to other potential trouble spots. Our crew uses state-of-the-art gas leak detection equipment that is capable of detecting even the tiniest whiff of gas around the property. Once we have ascertained the severity of the leak in our report, we provide repair recommendations that we can follow through on and make your home safe again.?
