December 15, 2015 -

Serving the commercial and residential electrical needs of the people of Huntsville since 1970, Allied Electric Inc. has established themselves as one of the leading electric contractors of Huntsville area. With their highly professional approach and impressively reliable results over such a long period of their work, the company has gained a great name and has become go to name for the people there. Continuing their successful run, the company has announced their new and improved electrician services for residential as well as commercial needs of their clients.

The company representatives said that the company specializes in large commercial as well as residential electrician services. While talking about the services that they offer, they said that the company provides expert services in design-build work, specialty lightning, infrared scanning and commercial service contracts for large commercial needs and renovation, power planning, wiring repairs and maintenance, energy audits, electrical safety devices and much more for the residential electrician needs of their clients.

The proud part of company's recent successful projects with the big names like Dynetics, Decibel Research, Lockheed Martin and Highland Office Park, Rick Taylor, representing Allied Electric Inc., said that credit of their success goes to their team of highly skilled technicians who carry a collective experience of over hundreds of years in electrical repair and services in Huntsville. He added that the company makes sure to provide continuous up-to-date training to their technicians to ensure the better than best services to their clients.

"From corporate parks to your neighbor's backyard, we provide power solutions that deliver," Rick said while talking about the extent of their services. Talking about their journey so far, he said that the family owned and operated company was started in 1970 by Ralph Hanback in a small house in Hundley Drive. "The highly impressive work and continuous high quality results helped the company to gain success and stand proud as one of the leading Huntsville Electrician Contractors," said Rick.

Providing impeccable services in a highly professional manner, the company has been getting rave reviews from its clients all along their journey. Working continuously for improving themselves, the newly announced improved services can be seen as one more positive step taken by the company to provide better than the best services and experience to their customers.
