Anthony Wimpey Plumbing Reveals How To Spot Plumbing Problems And When To Call a Lawrenceville Plumber

October 10, 2023

Lawrenceville, Georgia - October 10, 2023 -
Anthony Wimpey Plumbing, a leading local plumbing company in Lawrenceville, Georgia, is helping homeowners learn how to identify plumbing problems. And pointing out the signs that let homeowners know to call a plumber. By recognizing these signs early on, and calling a plumber, homeowners can avoid major issues and costly repairs down the road.

"Plumbing issues that range from a minor nuisance to a major disaster happen every day. And many times, homeowners do not notice a minor issue until it becomes a major problem,? said Dale Wimpey, owner of Anthony Wimpey Plumbing. He adds that "knowing how to spot plumbing problem warning signs can help to avoid a plumbing emergency later on.?

According to Wimpey, low water pressure can be more than just an annoyance and often indicates that something is clogging the pipes. If the water pressure in the house suddenly decreases, it is best to call in a professional Lawrenceville plumber right away.

Slow draining sinks or showers can also be a warning sign of potential plumbing issues. While this can be caused by debris such as hair or soap scum, if all the pipes in the house are slow to drain, there could be a clog in the main sewer line, which is considered a plumbing emergency.

Brown spots on the ceiling are another sign of possible plumbing problems. These unsightly spots could be due to a pinhole plumbing water leak above the ceiling. Before repairing the ceiling, it is essential to have a plumber locate the source of the leak and repair it.

"Aside from the sound of rushing water, pipes should be quiet," says Wimpey. "A rattling sound in the pipes, particularly right after shutting off a valve, could be water hammer." Wimpey goes on to explain that ?When the flow of water abruptly stops or changes direction, a shock wave is created which can lead to hammering sounds. Water hammer can be due to high water pressure, poorly secured pipes, or flooded air chambers.?

Other potential signs of plumbing issues in the home include frequently clogged or gurgling toilets and peeling or cracked paint in the bathroom. Additionally, rising water bills are usually a sign that there is a major leak occurring. Calling a plumber when noticing any of these signs is the best course of action for homeowners.
