October 05, 2023

Broadlands, Virginia - October 05, 2023 -
On the latest episode of the "Aviation Insurance Podcast," hosted by Tim Bonnell Jr., industry veteran Ed Bolen, President and CEO of the National Business Aviation Association (NBAA), shared his insights on the transformative technologies shaping the aviation landscape, the overarching commitment to safety, and the pivotal role insurance plays in the sector's continued growth.

Throughout the discussion, Bolen emphasized the importance of integrating new technologies with training and safety protocols. He shed light on the advancements in unmanned aerial systems, advanced air mobility, and the revolutionary auto-land technology, which enables planes to land autonomously. On the topic of safety, Bolen stressed the necessity of enhancing situational awareness, using data-driven approaches, and implementing standardized training curricula.

In light of the increasing costs of insurance in recent years, Bolen emphasized the importance of transparency and the use of empirical data for fair evaluations. He recognized the pivotal role insurance plays in shaping safety, equipment, and training standards, often even more influentially than regulatory bodies like the FAA.

Looking to the future, Bolen noted that while the business aviation industry has made tremendous strides, the challenges of maintaining access to airports and airspace, articulating a positive and accurate image, and ensuring affordability persist. He also highlighted the NBAA's focus on sustainability and the industry's proactive stance on adopting green technologies.

The discussion also touched upon the much-anticipated NBAA annual convention scheduled in Las Vegas. Bolen offered listeners a sneak peek into the new initiatives, keynote speakers, and cutting-edge technologies set to be showcased at the event.

The episode wrapped up with a reminder of business aviation's role in attracting the best talent and providing growth opportunities for individuals.
