Don?t simply go and pick the cheapest quote of a sole trader tradie working from their van. Some tradies who help you with your bathroom renovations may not require a trade licence in some states, but all, absolutely, must be qualified and insured.?

The spokesperson adds, ?Building and renovating bathrooms is our speciality. As a result, we have fine-tuned the bathroom renovation process to make it easier for you. You will find creating your new bathroom is as easy as 1-2-3 with our simple 3-step process.? The first step in their process is for them to visit the home of the potential client in order to offer a free quote. Using their many years of trade background and experience, they will quickly evaluate the bathroom?s plumbing, heating, electrical, drainage, and ventilation needs. Whenever possible, they will recommend ways to enhance the functionality of the bathroom. After this visit, they will invite to homeowner to visit their showroom to discuss their quote and bathroom design recommendations. Each showroom is provided with a special tile table to allow to homeowner to easily visualize how the floor tiles will coordinate with the wall tiles and cabinetry. They also have complete bathroom displays to allow the homeowner to visualize the appearance of the new bathroom.

The third and final step will be the actual renovation of the bathroom. Each client will have their own bathroom construction manager to oversee all aspects of the bathroom renovation project. The bathroom construction manager will also supervise all of the trades people working on the project. It is important to note that all members of the bathroom renovation team are licensed and experienced tradespeople who can confidently deliver first-class workmanship.
