Insurance Covered Breast Pumps, based in Bloomington, IL, is helping women and families across the nation access breast pumps through insurance. The organization firmly believes that access to breast pumps is a right that everyone is due, and they encourage families to reach out today for assistance securing a breast pump that meets their needs.

While many might assume breast pumps are a luxury product, they can be invaluable for families in a variety of situations, such as those where both parents work. However, this is only one example of situations where breast pumps can have a positive impact on a family?s well being.

?You may need to express milk at times that you are away from your baby,? notes Insurance Covered Breast Pumps, ?and this is not just applicable if you?re a working mom. In some cases, your baby may be ill or premature and not always ready to feed when you are ready to express, so using a pump can make sure you keep up milk production. Some mothers even use pumps to express when their breasts are too full as this could keep their baby from latching on properly. Whatever the case may be, it is very likely that a breast pump will improve your ability to care for your baby.?

Insurance Covered Breast Pumps is a full service online (BOC accredited) breast pump provider. They support mothers through the Affordable Care Act (ACA), which requires health plans to cover breastfeeding support and supplies. Where other organizations may attempt to save money by offering substandard products, however, Insurance Covered Breast Pumps makes it their mission to help mothers and families get the product they prefer most, along with the necessary supplies, at little or no out-of-pocket cost.

Insurance Covered Breasts Pumps exists to simplify everyone?s journey towards obtaining a breast pump via insurance. While breast pumps are covered, certain brands or organizations may be less than convenient to use, which can add to a mother?s stress and make it more difficult for an infant to be fed on an appropriate schedule. Given what is at stake, Insurance Covered Breasts Pumps makes it their business to make the process as easy and straightforward as possible, and their customers tend to report enjoying a great deal of success in this regard.

One goes so far as to explain that they initially tried to work with another provider to obtain the breast pump product they were interested in. Upon speaking to the provider?s representatives, however, she learned that the model she wanted was not covered and she would have to invest more money to get a similar product. Since she knew her rights, she decided to try working with other organizations, and that brought her to Insurance Covered Breast Pumps.

Her review explains, ?Now breast pumps are covered by insurance by law, so I decided to call around. I found this company called Insurance Covered Breast Pumps. I filled in the paperwork, and I received an email that I was qualified. I entered the S1 as my choice, and it showed up as 100% covered. I selected the option, they emailed me another form, and within 2 days I had the Spectra S1 at no cost to me. Wonderful, no-hassle website. Very smooth process. I highly recommend this website.?

Insurance Covered Breast Pumps has partnered with a large number of commercial insurance companies to ensure their customers have as much choice as possible when searching for breast pumps. The company is ready and willing to take a number of steps on a mother?s behalf, such as working with her insurance company to determine benefits for her insurance covered breast pump, filing an insurance claim on her behalf and even helping her to look for an affordable alternative if her insurance company does not cover a breast pump.

Essentially, the company takes care of the vast majority of the administrative hurdles associated with obtaining a breast pump through insurance, allowing mothers to focus on themselves and their baby.
