December 04, 2023

London, England - December 04, 2023 -
Home Instead Redbridge & Walthamstow is happy to announce their outstanding home care service in the areas of Redbridge & Walthamstow has been given a ?good? rating by the Care Quality Commission (CQC). They have been building a reputation as a top provider of home care, which is a more affordable option compared to residential care while also helping people remain the comfortable environment of their home for longer. The services they provide include companionship at home, home help, overnight care, and personal care.

Home Instead will first provide a care consultation where they evaluate the care and support requirements of the elderly loved one or the person requiring care and support in their home. They will inquire about what is really important to the person who needs care. They will examine the person?s health needs, life history, lifestyle, and daily routine. Next, they will collaborate with the person needing care and family members in developing a care plan to achieve the goal of continuing to be independent in their own home and other related goals.

The home visits they provide will have various purposes. These include: companionship, home help and housekeeping, personal care, night care, day care, and respite care. With the companionship service, the person requiring care will enjoy spending time with a care professional who has been carefully chosen to be a match for the elderly person or the person requiring the service. This has several purposes, such as: helping the person continue to be active; ensuring that the loved one has someone to socialise with; providing assistance to the loved one in going outside the home; encouraging participation in activities both inside and outside the home; and helping the family of the loved one have peace of mind and to take a rest from caring.

Home Instead can also provide home help, which offers several benefits. These include: not having to worry about doing the housework; assurance that the home is clean and tidy; family members being able to socialise with their loved one instead of having to do the housework; provision of companionship; and peace of mind in the knowledge that someone is helping and checking in with the loved one when family members are not at home.

Personal care involves providing help to the loved one with daily routine, such as bathing or dressing. This service offers several benefits, such as: ensuring the loved one is supported and cared for with dignity, allowing them to remain independent; maintaining the loved one?s preferred lifestyle and routine; peace of mind that the loved one is being cared for; and providing family members some rest from caring.

Respite care offers several benefits. First, the loved one who needs care can continue to stay home while family members can take a break. Second, the care provided is based on the specific needs of the loved one. Third, family members can have peace of mind in the knowledge that their loved one is being cared for by care professionals who have been assured to be a match to the person needing care and the family. Fourth, the care will be provided by highly experience and trained care professionals.

Launched in 1994 by Paul and Lori Hogan, Home Instead offers their services to the elderly to ensure they have a positive ageing experience in their own homes. The founders had personally experienced the hassles that dozens of other families had experienced when they endeavoured to keep their 89-year-old grandmother safe and healthy at home. She was their first client and since then, the business has grown into one of the top global home care networks, providing the necessary support for more than 100,000 seniors. In 2021, the company was acquired by Honor, and in 2022, the Best Home Care Group bestowed on them the 2022 Home Care Award.
