Turn off the main water line: Prevent additional water from entering your property. Switch off the electrical circuit breaker: Ensure safety by cutting off power if it is safe. Avoid using electrical appliances: Minimize the risk of electrical shock. Remove wet items: Remove wet rugs, drapes, carpets, and upholstery. Protect valuables: Safeguard computers, art, and important documents in a secure location. Mop up excess water: Mitigate damage by removing standing water as much as possible.

The Consequences of Delaying Water Damage Treatment

Even from the smallest leaks, water damage can have severe consequences if left untreated. Structural damage to drywalls and foundations can devalue properties and necessitate costly replacements.
