Revolutionizing Online Reputation: GetDandy.com Launches AI - Powered Assistant For Effortless Review Management

December 15, 2023

Irvine, California - December 15, 2023 -
GetDandy, based in Irvine, CA, is delighted to announce the launch of a new AI-powered assistant that supports convenient and accessible review management processes. In a landscape where a single unfair review can impact a business? prospects, Dandy?s service enables them to streamline their strategy at every level.

A representative for the agency says, ?We are extremely proud to unveil our new AI-powered assistant, trained explicitly to aid your review coverage and take the hassle out of this branch of digital reputation management. Once established and connected to your business account, this tool will automatically handle unfair negative reviews and give you options to improve your online reputation.?

Having worked with numerous clients to refine and automate their review assessment process, GetDandy understands what is most needed in the industry. As is the case in many situations, the agency?s conclusion is that the most important factors a business will consider are time and cost, and this is what their AI-powered assistant has been designed to address. For a relatively small investment, the assistant will help marketing teams manage online reviews ? even at exorbitant scales ? without forcing them to dedicate hours upon hours of their time on what may often be a repetitive and unwanted task.

GetDandy has already had automated tools in place that allowed clients to parse through thousands of reviews in a matter of minutes (and faster), which has proved especially useful in situations where a business gets unfairly ?review bombed,? where thousands of users or bot accounts target a brand with negative reviews in order to make it appear they have no positive reputation.

GetDandy has always been able to counter this, but the new AI-powered tool enables clients to go a step further. This capability also allows users to control their reputation management suite from a single dashboard, affecting several platforms at once if need be, including Google, Yelp and more.

?We realized that clients still had to log on and monitor what their tools were doing in order to get the most use out of them," said a company representative. "We have also had users express that they felt obliged to check on the system more often than might have been strictly necessary as it was somewhat dependent on human review in order to function at its peak. However, with AI, we can solve this issue, combining its strengths with our existing software base to produce a fluid, self-propelling system. In other words, you will find that our new tool requires less hands-on time, allowing you to focus your efforts elsewhere and still be confident that GetDandy is protecting your reputation online.?

Since the tool utilizes the power of AI, it can also respond to reviews if necessary, and it can do so in a credible, professional manner. With hundreds ? or even thousands ? of reviews coming, especially in the period immediately surrounding a product launch, it is crucial for a business to maintain a certain level of engagement with all of its customers. This applies to positive comments as well as negative reviews, since customers always prefer to feel as if a business is listening to their feedback.

Manually seeing to every customer?s inquiries and so on can be an efficient and time-consuming process, and GetDandy eliminates the stress and hassle of engaging with this process any more than the client wishes to. The tool, the agency confirms, can even function independently, which in practice means a user can go extended periods without logging in to evaluate incoming reviews. GetDandy?s AI-powered tool will be on watch, always, and its response style can be determined during setup.

?I couldn?t believe it!? says one of the agency?s clients. ?I got a notification saying a negative review had been removed. Then another! And another! And another! Fourteen negative reviews were successfully disputed in the first two weeks without having to lift a finger! I am eagerly recommending GetDandy to all my clients as both a tool to remediate and protect their all-important reputation.?

GetDandy is standing by to demonstrate to any and all interested parties why their clients keep coming back. The agency offers clients an opportunity to book a demo at a time that is convenient for them. Bookings can be scheduled via the official GetDandy website.
