Lakeside-Hire, a business in Aveley, Essex, United Kingdom, is proud to announce that they now offer the Desksurfer Hire. This is a system designed for contractors to help reduce the risks of working at heights in offices.

"If you have ever worked at heights in an area with desks, you will know how slow the process is because there are so many access issues," says Matthew Browne from Lakeside-Hire. "The Desksurfer offers an entirely new concept that is easy to use and install, saving employees of contractors a lot of time, while keeping them safe at the same time."

Working at heights continues to be one of the most dangerous forms of working overall. However, working at heights does not necessarily mean dangling off cables from a skyscraper. Rather, it is any job that involves being off the floor, be that one foot or 100 feet. Safety must always be the top priority and Lakeside-Hire feels that the system offers tremendous safety without any complexities. More details can be seen in a video at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rOL30ZH2pK0>.

"The Desksurfer fits through doors and is very lightweight," adds Matthew Browne. "We believe it offers an 800% improvement on efficiency compared to other models. Very simply put, you roll the mobile scaffolding tower underneath a desk, and the work platform is above the desk. No more need to stand on chairs or on desks to reach the ceiling, but real safety every step of the way."

People are encouraged to visit the Desksurfer Hire website to find out about rates and to hire the product. It is available for next day delivery, which means there should be nothing standing in the way of operatives doing their job safely. The product has received a number of tremendously positive reviews.

"I was skeptical, I'll be honest," says Ruth A. "Working in office environments at heights is always hard, and while we are regularly promised methods of improvement, they are never really delivered. Not so with Desksurfer. I was beyond pleasantly surprised. I received it the very next day and was able to complete a job in an hour that would normally have taken much longer. Well done."
