Atlanta, Georgia - December 19, 2023 -
Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., a law firm based in Atlanta, GA, wants to emphasize they are offering the services of a wrongful death lawyer Atlanta residents can depend on. It is important to note that pursuing a wrong death case is complicated because the facts about how the incident had occurred are frequently in dispute. They are offering legal representation for the families who had lost a loved one as a result of the negligence or wrongful acts of others. The firm can take care of all wrongful death cases across the state of Georgia in all of their locations.

The law firm can handle a range of incidents, each needing a particular legal expertise and comprehension of the applicable laws and regulations. The practice areas include: motor vehicle accidents, medical malpractice, workplace accidents, nursing home abuse, unsafe premises, and inadequate or faulty security. Motor vehicle accidents include: car accidents, motorcycle accidents, truck accidents, and ATV and boat accidents.

Medical malpractice is a distinctively complex area of law because of the need to comprehend medical procedures and standards of care. These include: misdiagnosis and failure to diagnose; surgical errors; birth injuries; hospital negligence; and anesthesia and pharmacy errors. Nursing home abuse cases include: improper physical restraint and chemical use; and neglect resulting into dehydration, malnutrition, and preventable infections.

Workplace accidents may include construction site accidents, such as explosions, falls, and equipment failures; and electrocutions and defective machinery. Unsafe premises cases include: unsafe conditions in retail, industrial, and residential areas; parks and recreation areas; and hazardous waste spills.

Faulty or inadequate security cases include: fatal attacks in parking lots and apartment buildings; unsafe dorms with broken alarm systems; untrained security guards and unauthorized access using duplicate keys; and non-functioning video surveillance. A faulty or non-functioning video surveillance system may have contributed to the wrongful death of a loved one.

Chris Dietz, manager at Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., says, ?Pursuing a wrongful death action in Georgia is complicated. Facts about how the event occurred are almost always in dispute. Those responsible and their large and powerful insurance companies are likely to argue that they honored any duty to protect your loved one. They will claim it was just an unfortunate accident. To fight back, you need a legal team experienced in all aspects of getting the families of Georgia wrongful death victims the maximum compensation for their losses.?

The expert lawyers at Kenneth S. Nugent will call on their best accident reconstructionists and medical experts to examine the causes and circumstances of the death of the client?s loved one. In addition, they will make sure that all necessary forms and paperwork are completed properly and submitted within the allotted timeframe. This will optimize the amount of settlement obtained from life insurance proceeds, pensions, Social Security benefits, and military benefits.

Chris Dietz adds, ?Make sure that those responsible for your loved one?s death are held accountable?and that they do not do this to someone else in the future. Call our firm and speak with a Georgia wrongful death attorney if a loved one has been the victim of a wrongful or accidental death. We serve all of Georgia, including Rome, Warner Robins, Sandy Springs, and Douglasville.?
