A stainless steel hand cheese grater released recently by Aurora Product Development and Distribution, has become a top seller on the Amazon marketplace. Amazon is currently the exclusive marketplace to buy the product released by the El Toro, California based company.

Michael A. Wells, spokesperson for the company, released a statement about the grater's recent popularity stating that, "Our hand grater has made quite a splash in the culinary world, and we couldn't be more pleased."

The grater, which can be seen at <https://www.cuisinefx.com/index.php/products/extra-coarse-grater>, features an extra coarse, classic blade, and is designed to reduce the stress normally caused by repetitive tasks. It is the third hand grater released by the company, under the premium kitchen brand CuisineFx.

The company credits most of the popularity of the grater to its design. It features an 18/8 stainless steel coarse blade with sharp teeth, which Wells states is perfect for grating hard or soft cheeses as well as various vegetables, chocolate, potatoes, and other fruits and vegetables. "All of our products are designed to last for years and to remain sharp much longer than other similar products on the market. The ergonomic handle on this hand grater is perfect for those who may have arthritis or whose hands generally get tired after repetitive grating tasks," states Wells.

The handle is specifically designed to prevent the grater from slipping out of its user's hands, and the grater features numerous safety features like a rubberized foot that will prevent slipping and help protect countertops.

Wells states that the grater is safe for the dishwasher and is designed to store easily with a plastic cover that protects both the grater and hands when it is stored in a drawer or cabinet. "There are several features that we believe make it so popular," he says.
