

Minneapolis Criminal Defense Lawyers Defend Clients From Burglary Charges

January 22, 2024

Minneapolis, Minnesota - January 22, 2024 -
Minneapolis, MN based Ryan Garry LLC, Minneapolis Criminal Defense Attorneys is standing by to defend the rights of clients who are facing burglary charges. As part of their support system, the firm is sharing details on this crime and how it is prosecuted in the state of Minnesota.

Ryan Garry, LLC has long established themselves as premier Minneapolis criminal defense attorneys who represent both individuals and businesses dealing with accusations and criminal charges brought by the state and federal government. They often make it a point to educate their clients as well as the community to ensure they can make informed decisions if they are dealing with criminal charges.

As the law firm explains, burglary is split into four degrees. While the specific definitions can vary by jurisdiction, there is a commonality between the four degrees across all jurisdictions. First degree burglary is the most serious degree and usually involves breaking into a dwelling (such as a house or apartment) with the intent to commit a crime (itself often a felony), inside. The presence of people in the dwelling at the time of the burglary may enhance the severity of the offense. This offense carries a sentence up to 20 years in prison and/or up to a $35,000 fine; the minimum sentence is six months in the workhouse.

Second degree burglary is often a broader category that includes unlawfully entering various structures, not just dwellings, with the intent to commit a crime within. The conditions under which structures qualify for second degree burglary are if the building is a government, religious, historic, or school building ? and the offender enters without consent and either with intent to commit a theft or property damage or commits such a crime. Second degree burglary carries a sentence of up to 10 years in prison and/or up to a $20,000 fine.

Third degree burglary may follow the act of a building without consent, with intent to steal, commit a felony, commit a gross misdemeanor within (or actually committing such a crime within). The sentence is up to 5 years in prison and/or up to a $10,000 fine. Finally, the least severe degree is fourth degree burglary, which means entering a building without consent and either with intent to commit a misdemeanor (not stealing, or committing such a crime). The sentence is up to 1 year in prison and/or up to a $3,000 fine.

The services provided by Ryan Garry LLC, Minneapolis Criminal Defense Attorneys have earned the law firm a high standing with the community. M. Erdahl says, ?I emphatically would not hesitate to recommend this firm to family and friends, and I have them on speed dial if, God forbid, I ever need their services again. After steadfastly leading me through the gauntlet of the justice system during my recent case, I will always put my faith in Elizabeth and Ryan. Because of their genuine compassion, concern and ability to find humor in dark situations, I now consider them friends.?

In another review, J. Khan writes, ?I write about my experience related to Ryan, Shelly, and Elizabeth helping me with two cases. Ryan is a giant when it comes to criminal defense. His office is prompt, and staff exceptional when it comes to communication. They are non-judgmental in their review and straightforward in setting up expectations. Best of all, being wrongfully accused, they were able to get the desired results for me. I owe them and give them my highest recommendations in any criminal defense.?
