January 02, 2024 -
Gibbs & Crivelli, Slingshot Law, a firm based in Austin, TX, is pleased to announce they are offering 24/7 personal injury legal assistance and unparalleled client support to residents of Austin and neighboring areas. They want to emphasize that filing a personal injury claim can help accident victims in recovering damages suffered, such as medical expenses, lost wages while recovering from the injuries, emotional trauma, and more.

A spokesperson for the firm says, ?When dealing with the aftermath of your accident is an uphill battle, you need dedicated representation that can level the playing field. Grounded in our commitment to justice for accident victims, Gibbs & Crivelli, Slingshot Law provides an unparalleled level of attention and support to our personal injury clients, helping you maximize your potential settlement and change your life.?

It is important to note that accident victims and the families of wrongful death victims in Austin generally have two years from the date of the accident to file a claim. This is mandated by the Texas statute of limitations for personal injury action. However, they want to point out that it is never too early to start a personal injury claim. They recommend speaking to a personal injury lawyer in Austin as early as possible to know the damages that can be claimed and to ensure that the claim will be heard. Those who want to know more about how Gibbs & Crivelli Slingshot Law can help can visit their website at https://www.slingshotlaw.com/.

They also want to point out that Texas is a fault state, which means that auto accident victims are given the option to file a claim directly with the insurance company of the at-fault party. In no-fault states, accident victims will need to start their claims with their own insurance company.

With regards to having to go to court, the spokesperson explains, ?Most personal injury claims are resolved out of court. Although it may be preferable to accept a settlement offer over fighting a protracted court battle, you will still need to negotiate a fair settlement with the at-fault party?s insurance company. If this sounds daunting, a top-rated personal injury attorney in Austin can help increase your odds of success.?

The types of cases handled by Gibbs & Crivelli, Slingshot Law are: personal injury, car accidents, truck accidents, motorcycle accidents, wrongful death, slip-and-falls, and work injuries. A personal injury case is present when the client was injured in an accident that was the result of the actions of another individual. To ensure that the victim will get a fair settlement, the personal injury lawyer at Gibbs & Crivelli will help the victim battle it out with the insurance companies and build the strongest possible case.

Founded in 2019, Gibbs & Crivelli, Slingshot Law is a provider of board certified personal injury legal services for individuals who have been seriously injured in car accidents, wrongful death incidents, dog bites, workplace injuries, and other incidents involving serious injury. The firm takes pride in being the slingshot that is capable of leveling the battlefield against insurance company giants who want to deny fair compensation for injuries. This law firm is built upon the idea that every individual, no matter how big or small, is entitled to a fair compensation. Early in their careers, Drew Gibbs and Scott Crivelli obtained a lot of experience in fighting for others in the courtroom. Drew was a prosecutor for the State of Texas, and Scott as an active duty Army JAG Officer. Through these experiences, both were able to develop a sense of duty in assisting victims fight against the insurance companies seeking to deny fair compensation.
