January 08, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Ops Kings, a B2B operations agency, is helping businesses automate and streamline their operations to allow them to grow as swiftly as they want. Their expertise is applicable for various kinds of industries such as coaching programs, insurance, B2B marketing, healthcare, and supply chain and logistics. They were able to help businesses add millions in both top and bottom-line income. They are ready to help get rid of bottlenecks in fulfillment, onboarding, reporting, hiring, and other operational problems that are slowing down the company. The final outcome will be the company running smoothly, allowing the business to focus on higher leverage tasks.

Ryan Hildebrandt, a co-founder of Ops Kings, says, "Our dual operations and automation process isn't a one-and-done service. We'll help you put your entire backend operation on autopilot, so you can focus on signing new clients, onboarding new employees, and 10x-ing your revenue."

They want to point out that while most businesses believe they have a problem with automation, what they do have is an operations issue. Ops Kings will begin by planning every internal process that is slowing down the business. They will determine the bottlenecks, gaps, and potential weaknesses, developing custom automations that integrate directly into the business system and will run 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

They also want to emphasize that off-the-shelf software platforms for project management, such as Monday, ClickUp, and Asana are likely to fail to live up to expectations, causing the company's team to waste dozens of hours every month making up for it. Ops Kings employs tools such as Airtable and Make to come up with customized workflows that integrate directly with the business' current system. After enabling these custom automations, the client ends up saving around thousands of dollars they usually spend on monthly subscription fees. The company can finally avoid enterprise software solutions that increase their prices every month.

Ryan says, "Our dual operations & automation process isn't a one-and-done service. We'll help you put your entire backend operation on autopilot, so you can focus on signing new clients, onboarding new employees, and 10x-ing your revenue.?

Ops Kings will apply a three-step process for streamlining the business. First of all, they will conduct a detailed analysis of the client's current processes to fully comprehend the business operations. Second, the team from Ops King will look for bottlenecks and possible areas that will benefit from automation with the end result of having a smoother and more streamlined business workflow. Third, they will use the custom-tailored solutions for fast results to achieve the client's specific goals.

Clients have been leaving highly positive testimonials about the kind of results they have achieved with the help of Ops Kings. For instance, Alex Welch, CEO of LIFT Media, said, "In 6 months revenue grew by 500% and I got back half of my day."

Ops Kings was founded by Ryan Hildebrandt and Tony Debelic to assist businesses with a yearly operating revenue of $500,000 to $25+ million by applying an extensive automation strategy to enable them to handle complex operational challenges at scale. By applying their vast experience in software and mathematics, they have been able to create custom automations that integrate directly with the business's existing technology stack. They make use of tools like Make & Airtable to assist businesses in scaling up without having to spend thousands in monthly subscription fees.

Ryan is an expert in robotics, mechanical engineering, and computer science, having studied mechatronics engineering at the University of Waterloo in Canada. He has designed, developed, and applied process automation software for several prominent manufacturing facilities of companies like Nestle, Mars, pharmaceutical firms, coal processing plants, and more. Tony is an operations consultant with vast experience in startups, e-commerce, and franchising. He has held primary roles as an operations executive at various well-known agencies.

Those who are looking for operations consultants can visit the Ops Kings website or contact them through the telephone or by email.
