

Auxilion Provides IT Support in Dublin Ireland

February 08, 2024

Dublin, IE - February 08, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Auxilion, a managed IT services provider in Dublin, Ireland, is happy to announce they are offering IT support solutions for businesses in Dublin, Ireland, and the UK. They offer various kinds of IT support solutions, such as: IT helpdesk, remote monitoring, application & software support, managed infrastructure, managed resourcing, digital transformation, daily health checks & reporting, and 24/7 IT support. Their goal is to optimise the client's IT solution availability and make sure the IT environment fully supports human talent.

A spokesperson for Auxilion says, "Give your business technology the framework it needs to maximise its value through optimised efficiency and enduring performance. No matter how complex your infrastructure or how dynamic your business environment may be, our IT support services provide peace of mind that your infrastructure is operating at optimal levels."

With their managed IT helpdesk, businesses are able to decrease IT expenses while boosting support for their core business activities. This helpdesk service provides always available, streamlined support to reduce IT overhead while enhancing service levels and the end-user experience.

Meanwhile their remote monitoring and management service helps to extend a company's ICT services to remote users and endpoints linked to the business network. Their application and core systems support service ensures their business applications and software systems are provided with the necessary maintenance to manage software updates, integrations with other solutions patching, and other IT issues. The ongoing support they provide optimises the value of applications and systems over time. More information about Auxilion can be obtained from their Medium page.

Their managed infrastructure services are designed to support and optimise every element of the IT infrastructure, from core apps and systems to server storage, hardware, and virtualisation infrastructure. They will perform system health checks regularly to identify and promptly address any IT service requirements.

Their managed resourcing services can help get the best value out of the company's employee skill-sets and internal resources. It can help to enhance availability and value-added distribution of internal resources, which can boost productivity and performance across projects and teams.

Auxilion also provides digital service transformation, which is designed to digitise and optimise the complete spectrum of the client's business services, from backend operations to the customer experience. With their daily health checks and reporting service, the IT system can be monitored for everything, from security threats to software bugs, while the detailed reports keep the client informed about the condition of the IT system.

Finally, their managed IT services includes a 24/7 service operations centre, which can fully support the client's business operations, whether they are running an on-premise, cloud-based, or hybrid system. Their 24/7 service operations centre provides a suite of toolsets to support event management, remote management, and other operations requirements.

Auxilion's managed ICT services involves four basic steps. The first step is a comprehensive evaluation of the business' ICT environment, including the assessment of existing systems, comprehension of business objectives, and determination of the challenges and inefficiencies of the business. The second step is to come up with a strategic plan that is custom-tailored to the company's specific objectives and needs. This involves mapping out the infrastructure, creating a roadmap for implementation, choosing the proper technologies, and outlining the timeliness and resource needs for seamless implementation.

Founded in 2012 by CEO Philip Maguire, Auxilion started as a subsidiary of Irish IT outsourcing and consultancy company I.T. Alliance. Its goal was to offer the technology, tools, and the talent as a single integrated service that is scalable from small and midsize enterprises (SMEs) to large business enterprises. As an award-winning Microsoft Gold partner, Auxilion installs Microsoft technologies that can enhance agility and provide game-changing results for clients through their unrivaled IT support services. They can guarantee 24/7 technology support at any day of the year via their ITIL standard led and ISO accredited service operations.
