Sydney Holistic Dental Centre, a dental office in Sydney, NSW, Australia, is offering dental implants as long term solution for tooth loss. Unlike other alternatives for the replacement of damaged of missing teeth, such as dentures that are uncomfortable and bridges that affect natural tooth structure, dental implants can provide a functional and excellent cosmetic solution. After having been used in dentistry for over 30 years, research studies have revealed that 90 percent of dental implants can last for 25 to 30 years as long as excellent oral hygiene is maintained.

A spokesperson for Sydney Holistic Dental Centre says, ?Dental implants can be used to replace a single tooth or several lost teeth, and can also be used as support for removable dentures to anchor or enhance their stability. It is also important to note that each unique person has a particular set of circumstances. The holistic approach dictates that the overall health of the patient has to be considered and to weigh both the advantages and disadvantages of the dental implants for a particular person.?

Dental implants are small titanium screws that are placed into the jawbone to serve as a platform on which to attach crowns or bridges securely to serve as replacement of lost teeth after the bone has fused to the metal after three to six months. Another purpose of these dental implants is to prevent the bone in the area from eroding away where teeth have been lost. But there are three key considerations before finally deciding to get dental implants. First of all, the patient has to take into account whether they are allergic or hypersensitive to the metal used for the implants. The second consideration is the patient?s general health condition. If the individual has a weak immune system, the longevity of the implant may be at risk. Third, it is important to note how the teeth were lost. If tooth infections were the cause, the implants many not last. The root cause of the problem has to be addressed first.

It is also important to consider the various alternatives to dental implants. These are: dentures, dental bridges, resin-bonded bridges, flippers, and implant-supported bridge. The dental implant process may take around six months, from beginning to completion, depending on the healing ability of the individual?s body.

It is also important to note that Sydney Holistic Dental Centre serves as a holistic dentistry, general dentistry, cosmetic dentistry, and preventative dentistry provider because it is also a good idea to take into account the dental service provider. Some of the dental centre?s most popular treatments include holistic dental treatments that also take into account the connection between oral health and general health, such as mercury amalgam removal, root canals, Invisalign and more. The dental office has a long history of serving the local Sydney community. They currently have an overall rating of 4.4 out of 5 stars on Google. In a recent review, Kathleen V. gave them a five star rating and said, ?I have had a lot of problems with my teeth for many years. Dr Lewis Ehrlich and the team at the SHDC have been the only ones who have been able to sort out my issues. I have never lived in Sydney but have for years travelled from interstate to continue my treatments at the SHDC. I highly recommend them.?
