The Surgical Review Corporation (SRC) is a globally recognized non-profit patient safety organization that administers elite accreditation programs for medical professionals, hospitals, and outpatient facilities worldwide. The rigorous accreditation process involves an SRC inspection to confirm that the applicant meets each accreditation requirement. The inspection process is divided into four parts: document submission, medical chart review, interviews, and facility assessment. It ensures that accredited surgeons like Dr. Iskandar meet and exceed nationally recognized patient care and safety standards.

Patients Benefit from SRC?s gold Seal of Excellence accreditation because they gain the confidence that their surgeon has received an independent and objective assessment. Dr. Iskandar?s path to this recognition reflects his relentless pursuit of surgical excellence. His educational background and continuous advancement in surgical skills, especially in minimally invasive and robotic hernia surgeries, have significantly enhanced patient outcomes and pushed the boundaries of surgical care. His patient-centric approach, involving thorough pre-operative planning and individualized treatment strategies, sets a new standard in surgical care. Additionally, Dr. Iskandar?s role as an educator and mentor, sharing his knowledge at Texas A&M School of Medicine and through professional collaborations, underscores his commitment to advancing hernia surgery as a specialty.

Dr. Iskandar has an impressive educational and professional background. Having completed their medical education at the prestigious American University of Beirut in Lebanon in 2008, Dr. Iskandar went on to build a foundation in surgical skills through two notable internships.
