Youth Champions is focused on empowering young individuals to build the essential developmental skills and knowledge that are not typically taught in traditional high school settings yet are crucial for students to thrive in their education, work, and personal lives.

Youth Champions serves approximately 250 high school students each year through a comprehensive curriculum that enhances their personal skills, helps them gain real-world experience, encourages them to explore potential career paths, and enables them to be competitive in the 21st-century marketplace. Students participate in a series of 24 virtual workshops on crucial topics such as problem-solving, leadership skills, financial literacy, good habit-building, personal responsibility, and independent thinking. In addition, students attend six exploratory field trips designed to expand their career and educational horizons and begin to identify their strengths and interests. Based on their level of participation, students can earn up to $1,000 each year.

Youth Champions was established in 2017 under the umbrella of AltaMed Health Services, a trusted community health organization in Southern California. AltaMed served as an incubator for the program by providing backend support, student recruitment, and program management. The decision to establish Youth Champions as an independent entity stems from the desire to provide even greater support to high school students beyond the Southern California community.

Ferdinand Mehlinger joins the existing nine board members: Jack Cline Jr., Cambria Cline, Jacky Dilfer, Vera Campbell, Cástulo de la Rocha, Michael Dolphin, Richard Gomez, Bob Smiland, and Heriberto Gonzalez.
