St. Louis cyber security consulting expert Vinny Troia, who is also a Certified Ethical Hacker and the founder of Night Lion Security, LLC, was recently a guest on Fox News.

During the segment, Troia discussed the flaws in recent information sharing laws. He expressed concerns regarding how companies would correlate their information and how this information wouldn't be able to be applied rapidly enough.

Hackers are able to take control of smart electronics, including security systems, thermostats, pacemakers, MRI scanners, ATMS, and other devices, and one way that Troia helps companies find these issues is by hacking into them. As a "white hat hacker", he helps companies identify areas for concern.
