Nanotise, a sanitizing solutions provider based in Australia, has announced it's branching out with a new location in Leichhardt, Sydney. This is a significant strategic shift for the firm, known for mould remediation and infection control, as it continues to evolve to meet the rising demands of customers in Sydney's Inner West.

Primarily recognized for its innovative use of nanotechnology and ATP swab testing, Nanotise has catered to a wide spectrum of clients through the years. These range from everyday homeowners to directors of educational centres and companies in the food industry. The firm has effectively served both the residential and commercial sectors. A majority of these clients have applauded Nanotise for its efficient service delivery, especially in making swift responses to mould outbreaks, and the effective treatment of mould infestations.

"Nanotise is not just broadening its geographical reach, but also enhancing the range of services we can provide our clients," explained CEO Peter Ross. "The inauguration of our Leichhardt branch will enable us to provide expert water damage restoration service in Leichhardt, and the surrounding Inner West. This move is in line with our firm's core mission to offer safe sanitizing solutions and competent mould remediation."

Beyond the use of environmentally-friendly methods, Nanotise stresses the imperative role that safety and innovative thinking play in their business operations. This commitment reinforces and complements their primary services, which include mould inspection, mould removal and testing. Operating under the identity of No Germs Pty Ltd, the company's location in Wahroonga, NSW, is its groundwork for creating solutions tailored to their customer's diverse needs.

With this expansion, Nanotise also hopes to enhance its services in industrial cleaning. This strategic advancement will allow the firm to use its substantial experience dealing with complex environments like shopping centres and construction sites. The breadth of cleaning activities they undertake ranges from cleaning facades, claddings, louvres and frames to specialized high-access installations. This inclusive approach meets the needs of a variety of clients.

"Our strategic objective includes making inroads in new markets whilst solidifying our presence in existing ones," Ross highlights. "This expansion is a testament to our unwavering commitment to our clients, and our aim of being a leading provider of pioneering cleaning solutions."

The new location in Leichhardt underlines Nanotise's continuous dedication to meet the rising demand for specialized sanitising solutions and services. These solutions are meticulously designed to be not only effective but also safe and sustainable.

Indeed, the future seems bright for Nanotise. As the company branches out into more regions, it pledges to uphold its established high level of service, continually raising the bar in the cleaning solutions industry.

Every new step is a reaffirmation of Nanotise's commitment to developing innovative strategies and solutions to ensure clean, safe environments. This devotion is what has propelled the company from its origins as a second-generation family business to become a modern and future-oriented entity that not only addresses today's challenges, but waves the flag for the opportunities of tomorrow.
