March 19, 2024

Nicosia, Cyprus - March 19, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The European Institute of Plastic Surgery (EIPS), known for its dedication to the provision of top-quality surgical and non-surgical procedures, has recently added non-invasive mesotherapy treatments to its range of services. This groundbreaking skin rejuvenating method, also known as microneedling, is now accessible at all EIPS clinics in Cyprus, Greece, and Malta.

Mesotherapy developed as a non-surgical cosmetic intervention, offers an effective approach for both women and men who desire to mitigate common skin issues such as scars, wrinkles, fine lines, and hyperpigmentation. This method involves injecting minor quantities of vitamins and other active components into the skin's mesodermal layer to incite cellular activity, in addition to the production of collagen and elastin. Consequently, patients can expect to see a noticeable enhancement in their skin appearance after their very first treatment session.

By providing this innovative, non-invasive mesotherapy treatment, EIPS not only broadens its range of services but also reinforces its commitment to delivering state-of-the-art treatments. Under the leadership of the board-certified plastic surgeon Dr. Demetris Stavrou, the institute has gained a remarkable reputation for its extensive selection of body, breast, facial, and skin surgery procedures. Additionally, it offers facial treatments and hair removal services, with the latest inclusion being the non-invasive mesotherapy treatment.

Initiating this advanced skin enhancement therapy in EIPS clinics is the institution's response to the growing demand for efficient, non-invasive treatments. Dr. Demetris Stavrou asserted, "Mesotherapy is an internationally accepted protocol that confronts a wide spectrum of skin issues. By incorporating this advanced treatment into our clinic, we're fulfilling our patients' wishes for effective, non-invasive skin treatments. We remain unwavering in providing superior patient care and will continue to enhance our services to accommodate the latest developments in the medical field."

EIPS goes beyond merely offering numerous services. It also ensures that patients are adequately informed to make vital decisions about their skincare and treatment plans. Detailed information about several surgical and non-surgical procedures, including expected results and post-operative care, is readily available via <https://eips.com/>. Specialists at the clinic have conceived educational videos and articles, therefore providing considerable insights for patients wanting to have a better understanding of their treatment options.

EIPS's communication with patients extends to Instagram, a social media platform where they regularly post updates, pre-and-post procedure photos, and facts about various procedures. Dr. Stavrou emphasized the importance of informed decisions, stating, "Our central objective is to make sure our patients are well-informed and at ease with their choice of procedure. No matter whether they are new patients or returning for further treatments, we want each person to feel appreciated and confident in their decisions."

The introduction of Non-Invasive Mesotherapy - Microneedling into EIPS's service offerings reflects the institute's dedication to patient satisfaction and continuous development. As part of their commitment, EIPS aims to persistently offer top-tier patient care while adapting to the latest breakthroughs in plastic surgery.
