March 25, 2024 -
All American Fire Protection, a top fire protection company serving North and South Carolina, has recently announced its latest expansion with a new office in Jacksonville, North Carolina. This move is a testament to the company's dedication in broadening their groundbreaking fire safety services to serve a larger audience.

Since its inception in 1998, All American Fire Protection has built a solid reputation for being excellent in providing fire extinguisher services, commercial kitchen exhaust cleaning, fire alarm installation, and maintenance of fire suppression systems. Currently, the company is proud to have over 30 dedicated staff members working in its two locations across the Carolinas.

Allen LaCosse, representative of All American Fire Protection, expressed, "This growth into Jacksonville marks an exciting development. Our new offices will allow us to render our top-notch services to a more expansive client base while maintaining our commitment to superior levels of customer service."

The newly opened Jacksonville offices will carry on delivering the extensive array of vital services that All American Fire Protection is known for. These range from various fire prevention, suppression, and mitigation services including fire extinguisher services, suppression system services, along with fire alarms and sprinkler systems to commercial kitchen exhaust cleaning, and emergency light systems.

Their fire extinguisher services, especially, encompass all levels of requirements - from selling to installation, to inspection and testing. The company also provides sound fire suppression system services, catering to commercial kitchen hoods and food trucks.

Acknowledging the criticality of early detection in emergency situations to prevent extensive damage, All American Fire Protection's alarm services grant that vital lead time. They install and maintain fire alarm systems designed for swift fire detection, facilitating rapid evacuation and response.

In the context of commercial kitchen spaces, the company's commercial kitchen hood systems and kitchen fire suppression systems are designed to combat fires swiftly and effectively, thereby limiting damage and ensuring the safety of the employees. As an often ignored but crucial aspect, they also offer consistent cleaning of kitchen exhausts to prevent grease accumulation that can easily trigger fires.

Their emergency light installation and testing services focus on providing vital light during emergencies like power failure or fires, guiding individuals to safety.

Underscoring their understanding of technological advancements, All American Fire Protection uses a program called "service trade" to manage all work assignments, ensuring all information is communicated explicitly and reports are instantly available post-inspection.

As Allen LaCosse notes, "Using the service trade program helps us efficiently track work orders, reinforcing our devotion to proficiency and superior customer communications."
