Bally, PA ? In an era where the concept of corporate social responsibility and giving back to society is not as prevalent, The Longacre Company (www.LongacreCo.com) in Bally, PA, a leading source for a full range of diverse mechanical and remodeling services, and a multi-faceted enterprise that serves residential, commercial, and industrial clients, recently ?walked the walk? by demonstrating what it means to be socially responsive.

Being a community-minded business that has been delivering the finest service and materials since 1922, the company took it upon itself to conduct an initiative which involved the provision of free electrical service and labor to The Open Link.

The Open Link is a non-profit organization in Pennsburg, PA that delivers community programs which provide services, education, and food to area residents in need. Having received the donation of a free walk-in freezer for the non-profit?s pantry from a community businessman, The Open Link still required installation of the unit in order to make use of it to help local residents. The Longacre Company stepped up by volunteering to do the installation free of charge. The company accomplished this by donating electrical expertise, technical skills, and labor toward the installation of the freezer in The Open Link.

Speaking about this act of kindness displayed by The Longacre Company, Stuart Bush, the Executive Director of The Open Link, commented thus; "Steve Longacre has been great throughout the process and his workers have been very thoughtful and helpful. Another generous community company helping us assist our neighbors. Great stuff."

The words of Bush further reveal the fact that The Longacre Company, with their team of professionals, is dedicated to ensuring that a client's project is everything they want it to be, from start to finish. "We want to thank you again for everything. Longacre is a company that is all about service, all about customers, and all about satisfaction," says George, one of the company's numerous satisfied customers.
