

New Project Management Coaching Service Launched

January 05, 2016

January 05, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Preben Ormen, a mentor and coach in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, has launched a new project management coaching service. He uses a unique approach known as the Project SUCCESS Method. The new Project SUCCESS Method coaching service is already proving to be very popular, with businesses and individuals alike experiencing its benefits.

Preben Ormen himself is quoted as saying: "Project management is a practice and success depends on experience, from learning on the job in real live projects alongside real live project managers who know their stuff. Education programs can give you theory and a few simple skills, but this is not enough. The painful truth is that all the project management courses in the world won't make you more likely to succeed as a project manager than someone who didn't do any of that. My new coaching service aims to achieve that."

Preben is uniquely qualified to deliver the coaching and mentoring service. He has worked with seasoned managers across the board, and also with new managers who are looking to make their mark in the world. He has touched on various markets such as purchasing and inbound logistics, sales, billing and outbound logistics, and human resources. Additionally, he has extensive experience with performance measurement and reporting. On top of this, he has a background in public accounting and IT audit. Full details are available through the About Coach Preben Ormen page on his website.

Those who have worked with Preben have been full of praise over the services that he provides. "I class myself as a good manager, and I have proven this through quite excellent results," says Sasha K. "However, there were some projects that I just couldn't get any further with, even though I knew they should be able to succeed. Preben reminded me about the definition of insanity: trying the exact same thing and expecting different results. His coaching showed me a whole new approach to thinking and managing and I'm already seeing the benefits."

Those who are interested in project management are encouraged to follow Preben's blog. He regularly shares industry relevant information there, designed to give people more information on managing a project.
