August 28, 2024 -

The Celebrity Source recently announced a new initiative to improve how brands can connect with high-profile figures. As part of this plan, The Celebrity Source is expanding its services to include more virtual appearances and digital campaigns. This change reflects the growing demand for remote interactions.

For over 35 years, The Celebrity Source has been linking celebrities, influencers, and speakers with brands, businesses, and non-profits. Their services include event appearances, PR, marketing, and advertising campaigns, as well as product endorsements and testimonials. Now, with a focus on virtual appearances, the company is adapting to the needs of their clients and the market.

To learn more about their virtual appearances and digital campaigns, visit their services page on their website.

Laurie Kessler, CEO of The Celebrity Source, shared her excitement about the company's expanded capabilities. ?The shift towards virtual events and digital campaigns is a significant one, and we are excited to offer even more comprehensive solutions to our clients. This expansion allows us to continue to connect brands and organizations with the right talent in more efficient and impactful ways.?

The Celebrity Source still offers traditional services that have been very successful over the years, such as securing brand ambassadors and spokespersons, cause-related marketing, influencers and social media campaigns, and celebrity gifting and award show gift lounges. Their network includes talent from film, television, music, sports, fashion, and social media, giving clients a variety of choices.

In recent years, brands have shifted how they engage with their audiences, often through digital means. Social media platforms and streaming services now allow brands to reach more people. This change has led The Celebrity Source to enhance its virtual and digital services, making it just as easy to book a celebrity for remote events as for in-person ones.

?The way we interact and engage has changed considerably, and our services need to reflect that,? Kessler added. ?Our goal is to provide seamless access to celebrities for any campaign or event, whether it?s in-person or online. This allows our clients to maintain a strong connection with their audience, regardless of the format.?

The company takes pride in being a top celebrity marketing agency, using long-standing relationships and industry know-how to create successful campaigns. They maintain a wide network of celebrities, influencers and notable experts, positioning themselves as a key player in both traditional and digital marketing. Their tailored solutions are designed to meet client goals effectively.

The Celebrity Source also invites businesses to consider how celebrity involvement can boost brand presence and credibility. With their extensive experience, they ensure clients get the best match for their needs at competitive rates. This makes the process to book a celebrity for events or campaigns straightforward and efficient.
