eDrugSearch.com, the Website that enables consumers to compare prices for prescription medications, announced today that it has launched a new coupon program that can save shoppers up to 90% on their medication costs. The site, which is free to use, lets users enter the name of a drug and see comparative prices charged by different licensed online pharmacies in real time. It's a price comparison search engine for drugs. The coupons are accessible directly on the site.

"Medication costs can vary widely, so it pays to research the best deals," says the president of the company. "You might be quite surprised by the savings you can find on our site."

Online pharmacies help consumers save on medications because they don't have the overhead of brick-and-mortar stores. Discount pharmacies, wholesalers and pharmacies in Canada reduce prices even further. eDrugSearch.com also offers convenience, as some people have trouble visiting a physical pharmacy due to illness or lack of transportation. The site provides a level of anonymity that many patients like. Health is personal, and consumers may feel more comfortable with less face-to-face interaction. The site also provides information about medications and ratings for pharmacies.
