TEFL Germany, one of the first "Teach English as a Foreign Language" (TEFL) providers, in Germany, announced today that it is launching a new program that enables students to become certified TEFL instructors in Germany. The company was founded by American expatriates who now live in Germany. The founders teach Spanish as well as English.

"We are excited to be offering this new program for TEFL certification," says the president of the company. "There are so many benefits to acquiring this credential in Germany today. We make you more valuable in the global economy."

TEFL Germany has been actively engaged in training executives at some of Germany's top firms and sports enterprises. The company publishes an extensive blog on English speaking education, including articles on business English, linguistics, story telling, the history of English and English development.

"Both EFL (English as a Foreign Language) and ESL (English as a Second Language) are useful in different ways. EFL is useful for those who are learning English for the first time, while ESL is useful for those who are learning English as a second language. Both are useful in different ways, and it is important to understand the difference between them."
