Sellersburg, Indiana - May 30, 2024 -

Ministry-To-Children, renowned for offering a trove of no-cost Bible-based resources for children's ministry, has notably broadened its digital footprint through the enrichment of its Facebook Page. An initiative meant to captivate a larger audience, this development showcases a vast array of materials ranging from Bible lessons for kids to craft activities, coloring pages, and comprehensive children?s ministry curriculum. This deliberate online expansion is intended to nurture a global network of educators, pastors, and volunteers committed to children?s spiritual growth via accessible and insightful content. For more comprehensive details on their resources and mission, interested individuals can visit their website directly at on their website.

This enterprise, erected by Tony Kummer in 2007, has consistently supplied resources to congregations of various sizes and affiliations worldwide. It was inspired by Kummer?s own challenges as a children's ministry director in a modestly sized congregation, where he grappled with the prohibitive costs and extensive time demands typical of conventional curriculum development. His ambition was to forge a reservoir of complimentary, downloadable content to bolster others facing comparable predicaments.

"When I was starting out in a small church as the children's ministry director, I didn't have a lot of options. We couldn't afford the expensive curriculum I saw in larger churches, and I didn't have the hours to craft lesson plans from scratch. That's when I saw the need for free ministry resources for churches all around the world," Tony Kummer elaborated, contemplating Ministry-To-Children?s inception.

The website's array of resources encompasses straightforward Bible lessons covering nursery to preteen youth ministry groups, craft ideas tailored to accompany Bible lessons, and engaging free coloring pages. Moreover, the site furnishes a full year?s array of Sunday school curriculum, ensuring educators have a comprehensive range of teaching materials fitted to young learners' necessities.

In pursuit of broader outreach and sustained provision of superior, free resources, Ministry-To-Children has augmented its Facebook Page. This advancement in social media presence promotes not just enhanced visibility but also cultivates community interaction through idea exchanges, feedback, and success narratives from across the globe. Home to thousands of followers, the page provides frequent updates, highlighting new resource reveals, seasonal offerings like complimentary Easter coloring pages, and advice for expanding children?s ministry endeavors.

?Our Facebook Page serves as a dynamic extension of our mission to support children's ministry globally,? Tony Kummer remarked. ?We believe that by fostering a community online, we can not only reach more educators and volunteers but also encourage the sharing of valuable insights and experiences that can benefit children's spiritual growth everywhere.?
