London, UK, DEC 18, 2015 - Premier independent jewellery and watch shop Jacobs the Jewellers (www.jacobsthejewellers.com) has just published a discussion on a new blog article published entitled 'Choosing Wedding Rings in Reading of Various Styles for the Big Day? was just published with further details. While newlyweds will only have to wear the rings ?til death do them part, there really isn?t a clear cut guide to buying the perfect wedding bands for one's special day since preferences are different for each couple.

The article details how 'engagement rings are all about the flashy stones, while wedding bands in Berkshire are all about the precious metals. While very traditional, popular choices would be yellow gold or pure gold. If the couple can?t seem to settle on one, they can agree to disagree and choose different metals but have them made so that they?re sporting the same style. They should not settle for 22ct gold bands, too soft to be worn daily, but rather, 18ct golden rings that can better handle the job of daily wear.?

The article relates that one should ?choose something that would complement the engagement ring or perhaps the groom?s favourite wrist watch. Custom handcrafted rings are the best bet to making sure that they are shaped just right to make it easier to be worn side by side with an engagement ring.'

The article states that a ?picking out wedding rings together can be a fun activity for the couples counting down the days until their special day.?

Reading jewellery shops always have knowledgeable staff available on hand to help not only answer questions, but to offer advice and recommendations.
