June 17, 2024

TUCSON, AZ - June 17, 2024 -
Dr. Greg Watson, a Professor of Business and Entrepreneurship at Pima Community College, has earned the prestigious ACUE Certificate in Effective Teaching Practice. This award is a significant milestone in Dr. Watson's academic journey. It highlights his dedication to using evidence-based teaching practices, which are key to promoting student success and retention.

To get the ACUE Certificate in Effective Teaching Practice Framework, one must complete about 60 hours of coursework. The program covers a wide range of essential teaching tactics. These include creating a productive learning environment, using active learning strategies, encouraging higher-order thinking, and using assessments to improve instruction and learning outcomes. These practices aim to make the classroom more engaging and effective.

Speaking about this achievement, Dr. Watson said, ?Earning the ACUE Certificate in Effective Teaching Practice Framework is a testament to my commitment to elevating the teaching standards and enhancing the educational experience for my students. By integrating evidence-based teaching practices, we can improve student engagement and academic performance.?

Research shows that students in courses taught by ACUE-certified faculty often achieve higher academic success and have better retention rates. This evidence showcases the importance of the ACUE certificate in improving the quality of education at Pima Community College.

Dr. Watson will be celebrated along with other ACUE-certified faculty members at a pinning ceremony on All College Day, which is set for August 23, 2024, at the West Campus. This event honors the hard work of faculty who have completed the ACUE program. The ceremony will recognize educators who are dedicated to using high-impact teaching practices to benefit their students.

Dr. Watson's award is part of Pima Community College's wider effort to improve teaching quality and promote student success. The college aims to create an environment that supports continuous learning and development among its faculty, which positively affects student outcomes.
