More About Mosaic Real Estate

With roots in Hawaii, Texas, and Southern California, Ruthy Taylor of Mosaic Real Estate experienced firsthand the excitement and challenges of moving and finding a new place to call home.

When she was 14, her parents bought their first home in Killeen, Texas, where they still live today. That experience planted a seed in her that would later blossom into her passion for real estate.

In 2010, she and her husband Andy moved to Tacoma to plant a church. Homeownership seemed like a distant dream, so they decided to buy a duplex and let the tenants help cover their mortgage costs. That purchase did not only change their financial future but also ignite their love for real estate investing.

As their passion grew, they ventured into real estate full-time. Together, Ruthy and Andy built one of the top-producing teams in the Pacific Northwest. Their success continued as they expanded their portfolio and became franchise owners of two Keller Williams Realty offices.

In March 2020, they opened their own independent brokerage, Mosaic Real Estate. Today, they proudly have 3 locations (and counting) with 180 agents.
