ZombieDisasterKits, a business in Vancouver, WA, is proud to announce that they have relaunched their website. The site has a completely new look and feel to it, and the company is asking customers to send selfies to them, which will be featured on the Home page. If they upload a travel photograph of themselves in a recognizable place such as outside a restaurant, city scape, familiar location or city icon, they will be enrolled in a contest to win entirely free prizes. Customers are speculating that the prizes will include all the items from their catalog of products such as the popular disaster free travel toiletries bag. Jillian Gregg from ZombieDisasterKits says: "We want our website to be far more interactive and to show real-life travel stories. At present, we're using images of products and the Zombie crew as they travel around the world, but we really want our customers to join in and send their own photographs. The selfies will be featured on the Home Page and winners will be notified by email so we can ship them their prizes." Since the website was relaunched, the Zombie crew has been traveling around the world. Their photographs are now featured on the site and show one of the crew going through airport security, for instance. They have also created a video of how the disaster-free travel kit can be put to the best use, hopefully enabling others to be inspired by it. The travel toiletries bag has already proven to be very popular among travelers. "TSA is a necessary hassle that every flyer has to deal with," says Marty S. "This portable carrying bag is an answer to all your medicinal/personal hygienic needs. Enclosed with a 3-sided strong zipper, the container has two sections, one-half is a clear zippered enclosure usable for small clothing goods (underwear, bras, socks, etc.) or other items like hairbrushes or a small hair dryer. The other half has 2 Velcro in-out clear bags for holding liquids and gels for inspection or to use to corral device cables and connectors. This is the traveler's dream case." The company hopes that more people like Marty S. will come forward and will also upload photographs of themselves while traveling, preferably while using the travel kit or sanitizing wand. In return, they promise that some excellent prizes will be awarded. Uploading photographs is very easy to do, simply email them to info@zombiedisasterkits.com. ###
