ATLANTA, GA - July 02, 2024 -

Arrowhead Clinic has put out an informative blog post to help people understand inflammation and how chiropractic care can help manage it. The blog, written by Dr. Summer Turner, explains that inflammation is a natural response of the immune system to injury or infection. It's a protective mechanism that helps the body get rid of harmful things like toxins, bacteria, and viruses.

Acute inflammation is usually short-term and goes away once the body heals. Signs of acute inflammation include swelling, dilated blood vessels, pain, heat, and redness. But inflammation can become problematic when it shifts from being short-term to chronic. Dr. Turner points out that chronic inflammation happens when the body's healing process isn't complete, leading to a prolonged inflammatory response. This can be due to many factors like chronic exposure to toxins, poor nutrition, repetitive injury, or ongoing stress.

Chronic inflammation can cause serious health problems if it's not managed. Dr. Turner notes that it can lead to long-term conditions such as cardiovascular disease, colitis, and even neurological diseases like Alzheimer's and Parkinson's. Understanding and managing inflammation is therefore very important.

The blog details how chiropractic care can help manage inflammation. According to Dr. Turner, chiropractic treatments can realign the vertebrae in the spine, which reduces pressure on the nerves and promotes a healthy nervous system. This can lower the production of neuropeptides, which cause inflammation. Chiropractic adjustments also help reduce cytokine production. Cytokines are proteins that manage immune system cells and can cause serious inflammation if they build up too much.

Besides chiropractic adjustments, Dr. Turner suggests lifestyle changes to fight inflammation. These include following an anti-inflammatory diet, exercising regularly, and keeping a healthy weight. Such changes can significantly reduce both acute and chronic inflammation.

"Understanding the difference between acute and chronic inflammation is key for effective management," said Dr. Turner. "Our goal at Arrowhead Clinic is to give our patients the tools and treatments they need to stay healthy and reduce chronic inflammation."

For those looking into chiropractic care, it involves manual manipulation of the spine to restore and maintain optimal communication from the brain to the body. This process effectively addresses subluxations, or spinal misalignments, enhancing overall body health and range of motion. Regular chiropractic adjustments can significantly reduce pain and prevent various ailments.

The clinic also focuses on treating injuries from auto accidents, sports activities, and workplace incidents. As a personal injury chiropractor, Arrowhead Clinic offers treatments that target the specific needs of patients dealing with these types of injuries. Dr. Turner highlights the importance of getting prompt medical treatment after an accident to ensure proper care and documentation for potential personal injury claims.
