OKLAHOMA CITY, OK - August 12, 2024 -
Cortes Law Firm is excited to announce new efforts to help families avoid probate in Purcell, Oklahoma. With over 25 years of experience in estate planning and probate law, the firm is dedicated to providing comprehensive solutions to transfer assets smoothly to heirs without the hassle of probate.

For families looking for a Purcell Oklahoma Probate Lawyer, planning ahead with a revocable living trust-centered estate plan is the most effective way to avoid probate. A revocable trust is a legal arrangement managed by a trustee for the benefit of one or more beneficiaries. Since assets held in a trust are not part of the probate estate, they skip the probate process entirely, making distribution to beneficiaries faster.

Steve Cortes, the head of the firm, said, "Our goal is to help families understand the importance of planning ahead. A well-structured estate plan can save significant time, money, and stress for heirs. Through a revocable living trust-centered estate plan, we can ensure that our clients? assets are distributed according to their wishes and in a timely manner."

Besides revocable living trusts, Cortes Law Firm suggests other strategies to avoid probate. These include transfer on death (TOD) and pay on death (POD) designations. A TOD designation allows the transfer of real property directly to a designated beneficiary upon the owner's death, while a POD designation does the same for bank accounts and securities. Both methods enable a smooth transfer of assets without going through probate.

Another important tool in estate planning is creating a pour-over will. This type of will moves any assets not transferred to the trust during a person's lifetime to the trust upon their death. Although probate is still required for assets not in the trust, a pour-over will ensures they are distributed according to the trust, maintaining the integrity of the estate plan.

It is also essential for individuals to review and update all beneficiary designations on retirement accounts, life insurance policies, and similar assets. Keeping these designations in line with the overall estate plan can prevent complications or unintended beneficiaries.

Steve Cortes highlights these measures by saying, "Proper estate planning requires investment in both time and money, but the benefits far outweigh the costs. By avoiding probate, families can ensure their loved ones are spared the prolonged and sometimes contentious process of asset distribution through the courts."

Cortes Law Firm also provides specialized probate real estate services. They guide clients through the legal process needed to transfer real estate to rightful heirs under a Judge?s Order. This service is especially helpful for families dealing with the complexities of real estate within estates.

Additionally, through educational initiatives and one-on-one consultations, the firm strives to make estate planning accessible and efficient for the community. Centrally located in Oklahoma City, Cortes Law Firm is convenient for residents from various parts of Oklahoma.
